PORT-AU-PRINCE, Aug. 22.—It was prophesied on the night of the resignation of the Cabinet that the morrow would be prelific of dire results. In fact, a repetition of the events of May 28 appeared to many to be extremely probable. The morrow came, calm and inwen tenor of his way. At about 10 o'clock heavy artillery commenced to boom, but before anybody could get excited it was explained that it was the feast day of the Asumption and the lower forts were proclaiming it. One looked in vain for excitement on that day; all was lethargy and silonce.

In the blaze of the afternoon of Aug. 19 the blaring of horns and the beating of huge drums arrested the attention of the wayfarer and called forth crowds from the surrounding dwellings. Presently the noise ceased and an Meer read a proclamation by the President announcing the formation of a new Cabinet.

The Newspaper Articles that Landed the Editor and Publishers in Jail,

A cablegram last week announced that the managers of the Hungobasi, a weekly newspaper published in Bengal, having a circulation of 20,000 copies, had been fined a large sum for printing articles derogatory to the Government. Copies of this newspaper have recently arrived in England, and they were found to contain the most virulent attacks upon the Indian Government. The articles are said to have attracted a large public attention in northern India, and the Government decided that they were calculated to under mine the Government's authority, and that stern measures must be taken to put an end to this sort of opposition.

The articles were certainly couched in the most wild and extravagant terms. Most of them related to the Age of Consentact, and the editor declared that this bit of legislation was intended to undermine the religion of the intended to undermine the religion of the native poonie. The newspaper also declared that fever, cholera, and other diseases are spreading with the extension of British rule in India. It said further that that rule was one of brute force, and that the fullan people were weighed down under the evils which the British had brought upon them. The newspaper also held that the Government was responsible for the floods, famines, and other great evils that had befallen the country within ten years.

The proprietor, editor, and manager of the newspaper were agreeted, and the magistrate

The proprietor, editor, and manager of the newspaper were arrested, and the magistrate declined to admit them to bail. The prisoners were therefore kept in sail until their trial occurred on Aug. 19. Only the results of the curred on Aug. 19. Only the results of the claims of both sides.

The contention for the defence was that the articles were written under the influence of strong religious excitement, and that although the innguage is toolish and intemperate, yet there is nothing in it which was intended or was likely to excite disaffection to the constituted authorities. The prosecution, however, agarted that the articles were outrageous in their distortion of facts, and that they were likely serously to affect the diovernment's position with regard to the people, and that the articles, in fact, could properly be regarded as treasonable.

Sisters of Charity to Teach in Public Schools.

Austin. Tex., Aug. 29.-The Board of Education has granted certificates to twenty-one listers of Charity to touch in the free public schools of Texas. This is a new feature, and is in accordance with a late ruling of the Attorney-General that they are entitled to certificates as long as they do not condition the doctrines of their Church in the school.

HE WOULD BAT PIE.

An Effort to Get Supper In a Country Town After Supper Was Over. It is a considerable undertaking to turn a country town out of one of its accustomed grooves. New York belongs to any stranger with money enough to purchase its favors, but a country town is the property of its inhabitants, and they run it to suit themselves. A New York man reached South Amboy the other night at half-past 8 o'clock tired and hungry. He went to a hotel and said he would like some supper.

"Too late." said the proprietor. "It's all cleared away."
"Oh, but I must have supper. I am hungry."

"Borry." said the hotel man: "but we cannot give you anything. The girls have all

But what will I do?" "Better try McGonegal's, down street and around the corner." The New Yorker arrived at McGonegal's and spoke of his yearning for supper.

"I cannot give you any," said a woman behind the bar. "The gentleman in the other oom has just got the last piece of bread in the house."

oom has just got the last piece of bread in the house."

"Can you not send out and get a loaf?"

"There is no one to send."

"Well. I don't want any bread. I'll eat supper without it."

"We have nothing but cold pickled lambs! tongues. Oh dear, I wish ovsters was here."

The New Yorker waited around the town and back to the railrond station. In a very unattractive-looking piace, suggestive of peanuts, smoking toloace, And files, was found a man behind another counter, on which were two or three outs of five-cent pies a little thicker than the piates they rested upon.

"Can I get supper here?"

"I had noding but apple ple, peach ple, and lager beer. I make that for you.

"Oh not I want a bet, good supper."

"But, see here, my friend, I've been all over the town and cannot get anything anywhere. Now, you know the town; what would you dif you were in my place and wanted a good supper?"

"What I'd do? I'd eat some pie and lager beer."

"Good evening."

"What I'd do? I'd eat some ple and lager beer."

Good evoning."
On the other end of the station was another restaurant, hung sil around with notices describing the sort of language customers might not use, forbidding smoking, and generally indicating that the place was managed to suit the prooristor rather han his customers. The man in charge was the biggest man in New Jersey—much larger than old Alderman Busch of Hoboken was at the time of his death.

"Can I get supper here?"

"Clam chowder, teelsteak pie, and beef stry."

"Really?"
"Really?"
"Chowder to begin with."
"Can I make you coeen, coffee, or tea?"
"Condee."

"Coffes."

The proprietor should be as great in fame as in size. His supper was not abundant and good, and it was followed by a bed at the hotel in a room with three windows and no mosquitees. A very lucky experience for one who tried to upset a little town by ordering supper after the rest of the folks had eaten theirs.

RETURNING FROM THE PACIFIC COAST

Men Who are Out of Work Think They are Lucky if They Can Get Away.
